THE SHOSHONE BUILDING

Change is inevitable. There are times when change is required and times when change is desired. When facing the prospect of change, reality is revealed and imagination expresses what could be. If imagination is boundless, the future has many possibilities. What guidepost is used to reach the goal?

Vision. It is more than sight. It moves through time and space stripping away the current scene while exposing the past and considering the future. With wisdom, imagination and creativity action is undertaken. The action is not cosmetic, but structural. Surfaces must be laid bare because enduring change is successfully built from a solid foundation.

When the vision becomes clear and is supported with courage and confidence, the plan becomes a reality. It takes courage to begin the process of stripping away the surface and confidence the work realizes the vision. Realization is embracing the change to make it part of the future.
