Faraway Worlds

One afternoon I stumbled upon an entirely new world. No... I found more than a new world. I found an undiscovered solar system with planets emerging from cosmic clouds. As I journeyed through this solar system, I saw a rift in the time-space continuum pushing worlds apart. I saw comets leaving trails of cosmic dust and wormholes leading to another dimension. It was a space of infinite vastness. It was an entirely new cosmology, all in an unknown language.

Earthbound geologists will tell you these are concretions in a bed of sandstone. The scientists will explain the history and the mechanism of the creation of this place. However, using some imagination and a sense of adventure, you too can experience these faraway worlds.
